Classroom Training Session on Management of Fire Insurance (CT-MFI)

(From: 9th to 10th December, 2024)

Program Concept and Objectives:

Historically Fire and Engineering insurances have been the main stay for General Insurers. In addition to being major avenues for generating insurance premiums, these lines of business have the potential of causing large losses as well. Insurers usually do a thorough job when they evaluate property vis-à-vis policy wordings and subsequent claims. Hence, insurers pay a lot of attention to claims in these portfolios and are very careful in evaluating risks and building loss control measures into the policy.

Property insurance professionals appreciate the importance of separate functions like risk management, underwriting, loss prevention and claims control as well as claims processing as areas of expertise. They also understand the need for integrated learning across functions, so that professionals can develop common approaches and strategies at company/ industry levels. In addition, each company would have its own internal risk appetite, strategies, pricing systems, and procedures for underwriting, claims processing etc.

College of Insurance has developed this course to suit the specific needs of Property insurance professionals from insurance companies dealing with diverse functions, such as risk analysis, loss prevention, loss control, underwriting, claims etc.
