Insurance Institute of India, Mumbai

Classroom Training Session on Rural and Livestock Insurance (CT-R&LI), (From: 4th September, 2024)

Program Concept and Objectives:

Rural economy plays a major role in a nation's development. India has one of the largest Cattle populations of the world and a large majority of Indians who are living in the rural areas depend on livestock for their livelihoods. Livestock insurance and various policies are designed specifically for the rural population to help the farmers. These also provide a huge opportunity for insurers to expand their business in the rural areas on the country. Over a period, livestock insurance mechanisms have evolved and help the rural population in facing the challenges of creating and maintaining livestock assets. The role of technology in managing Cattle related matters is also increasing.

College of Insurance is conducting a one-day comprehensive program which aims to equip the participants with the tools to develop and implement effective insurance solutions and help foster sustainable development in rural communities. The course is designed to help professionals involved in Livestock and Cattle Insurance understand the concepts better and help them in using technology more effectively to connect with the rural population.

Key Takeaways from the Program:

The programme would cover the following areas:

- Scope of Cattle, Livestock and other rural Insurance
- Government Schemes for Cattle and Livestock Insurance
- Use of technology in underwriting and claims management
- Challenges faced in using technology in rural areas

Participant Profile:

The course is designed for marketing executives and back-office teams working in Insurance companies, surveyors, and students of animal husbandry desirous of joining the insurance profession. Those dealing with Cattle, Livestock and Rural Insurances as well as technology partners to this segment of the market are welcome to attend.
